

Carlton G. Epps, Sr.
Chief Operating Officer, REACH! Partnership School

Carlton G. Epps, Sr. is the Chief Operating Officer of REACH! Partnership School, a two year-old Baltimore City secondary transformation school. In this capacity he represents the school's Operator, Civic Works, Inc. in all operational and fiscal matters, working closely with the school's academic leader, Principal Michael Frederick. Carlton is a product of the Philadelphia public school system and a graduate of Loyola's Sellinger School of business. He began working in Baltimore's schools as a member of the Board of Directors for the Academy of Finance and the Academy of Information Technology during their formative years, and later served on the Baltimore Education Network's Board of Directors. He also served as Chief Operating Officer for City Schools under Dr. Bonnie Copeland. These experiences have been invaluable in the launching of the REACH initiative. In addition to his work with REACH, Carlton serves on the Board of Trustees of the Baltimore Chesapeake Bay Outward Bound Center.
